Pathbuilders, Inc. Announces Start of 2007 InsigniaSM Class

High-potential women from 13 companies will participate in the four-month program for entry-level professionals.

ATLANTA – Pathbuilders, Inc. will kick-off its 2007 InsigniaSM class with an orientation and educational seminar at Villa Christina on November 27. The orientation will begin with a networking session and welcome message from Helene Lollis, Pathbuilders' president.

InsigniaSM is a four-month program designed for professional women in the first of four career stages identified by Pathbuilders:

- InsigniaSM: comprised of entry-level women who have the proven ability and desire to grow.
- PerceptaSM: comprised of junior-executive women learning to manage people and projects.
- Achieva[®]: comprised of mid-level women recognized as having senior-executive potential in their organizations.
- InspiraSM: comprised of senior-level women leading and setting vision for their organizations.

Pathbuilders offers professional development and mentoring programs designed to address each stage in a woman's professional career. The InsigniaSM program combines educational seminars with role-model mentoring and program-wide network-building. The InsigniaSM curriculum focuses on helping new professionals to establish credibility, better understand how businesses work, and build strong internal networks.

Participants in the 2007 InsigniaSM class are from the following companies:

CompuCredit Corporation
E.M. Stephens PR
Gas South

Georgia Power, a Southern Company
ING Investment Management
Junior Achievement of Georgia
Metro Atlanta Chamber of Commerce
Mirant Corporation
RBC Centura
SolTech, Inc.
United Way of Metropolitan Atlanta
